

It is a wise rule, firmly established by a long course of decisions here, that constitutional questions—even when properly raised and argued—are to be decided only when necessary for a determination of the rights of the parties in controversy before it. Thus, in the Charles River Bridge case, 11 Pet. 420, the Court said (p. 553): "Many other questions, of the deepest importance, have been raised and elaborately discussed in the argument. It is not necessary, for the decision of this case, to express our opinion upon them; and the Court deem it proper to avoid volunteering an opinion on any question involving the construction of the constitution where the case itself does not bring the question directly before them, and make it their duty to decide upon it." And see Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 103, et seq. Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483, 490. Blair v. United States, 250 U. S. 273, 279. Adkins v. Children's Hospital, 261 U. S. 525, 544.

The record wholly fails to reveal that petitioners have been deprived of any right guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, and I am of opinion that the judgment should be affirmed.

MR. JUSTICE McREYNOLDS concurs in this opinion.

UNITED STATES v. SHREVEPORT GRAIN & ELEVATOR CO.

APPEAL FROM THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA.

No. 19. Argued October 19, 1932.—Decided November 7, 1932.

1. Section 2 of the Food and Drugs Act punishes shipment in interstate or foreign commerce of any article of food which is misbranded; and § 8 declares that such an article in package form shall be deemed to be misbranded if the quantity of the contents be not plainly and conspicuously marked on the outside of the package, in terms of weight, measure, or numerical count; with the proviso "That reasonable variations shall be permitted, and tolerances and also exemptions as to small packages shall be established by rules and regulations made in accordance with section three." Section three provides that executive officers designated shall make uniform regulations for carrying out the Act. Held that the executive regulations are to fix the variations allowable, as well as tolerances and exemptions, hence the statute is not open to the constitutional objection of uncertainty in defining the offense. P. 82.

2. A statute should be construed where possible so as to avoid doubt of its validity. Id.
 3. In construing a statute, a court will disregard punctuation, or will repunctuate, to show the natural meaning of the words. P. 82.
 4. Reports of congressional committees, explaining the bill, may be considered in determining the meaning of a doubtful statute, but will not be used to support a construction contrary to the plain import of its terms. P. 83.
 5. Practical and long continued construction of a statute by executive departments charged with its administration and with the duty of making rules and regulations to carry it out, is to be accepted where the statute is doubtful, unless there are cogent and persuasive reasons for rejecting it. P. 84.
 6. The provision of the Food and Drugs Act, supra, for defining by executive regulations the reasonable variations that are permissible, from the quantities marked on packages, is not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power. P. 85.

APPEAL from a judgment quashing an indictment.

Solicitor General Thacher, with whom Assistant Attorney General St. Lewis, and Messrs. Erwin N. Griswold and W. Clifton Stone were on the brief, for the United States.

Mr. Yandell Boatner, with whom Mr. Judson M. Grimmer was on the brief, for appellee.

The statute does not validly define a criminal offense, and by reason of its uncertainty is invalid under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments. Levy Leasing Co. v. Siegel, 258 U. S. 241; United States v. Cohen Grocery Co., 255 U. S.

81; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214; United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278; Todd v. United States, 154 U. S. 282; Cline v. Frink Dairy Co., 274 U. S. 445; Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U. S. 385; United States v. Capital Traction Co., 34 App. D. C. 592; Champlin Refining Co. v. Corporation Commn., 286 U. S. 210. Cf. also, Smith v. Cahoon, 283 U. S. 553; Small Co. v. American Sugar Refining Co., 267 U. S. 233; Yu Cong Eng v. Trinidad, 271 U. S. 500.

The cited cases establish that in criminal statutes it is necessary that the legislature draw a line clearly distinguishing between what is permissible and what is forbidden.

The infirmity of the Act is not cured by departmental regulations. United States v. United Verde Copper Co., 196 U. S. 205; Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677; Williamson v. United States, 207 U. S. 426; Burnet v. Chicago Portrait Co., 285 U. S. 1.

These cases disclose that it is within the power of Congress to vest in executive officers the power to make necessary rules and regulations to enforce the provisions of the law, but that Congress can not delegate its power to make laws to an executive department or to an administrative officer, nor confer upon any such officer or the courts the power to determine what the rule of law shall be. In fine, Congress must prescribe the rule; details of execution may be established by regulation. In no event can the regulations alter, amend, or go beyond the provisions of the Act. Who is to decide in any given case whether the regulations exceed proper bounds? If the Secretaries have determined upon variations which they consider reasonable, are such determinations conclusive? Who is to say whether the regulations are not themselves unreasonable? In the instant case, a trial by jury must be had and the question decided by the jury. The jury must determine as a matter of fact whether the variations of weight in the packages shipped are reasonable under the circumstances. The report of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce is in agreement with these views.

The ultimate determination as to the reasonableness of the variations in a given case is for the court. Tolerances established by the regulations are advisory merely, and are in the nature of directions to the executive officers as regards the standards to be observed by them in initiating prosecutions under the Act.

The Act also is in conflict with Articles I, II, and III of the Constitution, separating the Government into legislative, executive, and judicial divisions, if its provisions in § 3 authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Commerce to make regulations are to be given the scope and effect now contended for by the Government.

MR. JUSTICE SUTHERLAND delivered the opinion of the Court.

The defendant (appellee) was charged by indictment, returned in the court below, with misbranding certain sacks, containing corn meal, an article of food, by labeling each of the sacks as containing a greater quantity by weight than in fact was contained therein, contrary to the provisions of the Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, c. 3915, 34 Stat. 768, U. S. C., Title 21, § 2, which make it unlawful to ship in interstate or foreign commerce any article of food or drugs which is adulterated or misbranded, within the meaning of the act. The penalty prescribed is a fine of $200 for the first offense, and for each subsequent offense, not exceeding $300, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court. Section 8, as amended by the act of March 3, 1913, c. 117, 37 Stat. 732, provides that an article of food shall be deemed to be misbranded—

“Third. If in package form, the quantity of the contents be not plainly and conspicuously marked on the outside of the package in terms of weight, measure, or numerical count: Provided, however, That reasonable variations shall be permitted, and tolerances and also exemptions as to small packages shall be established by rules and regulations made in accordance with the provisions of Section three of this Act.”

A motion to quash the indictment was interposed by the defendant upon the grounds that the act of Congress relied on is unconstitutional, because (1) the offense is not defined with certainty and therefore the act violates the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment, and the requirement of the Sixth Amendment that the accused shall enjoy the right “to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation”; and (2) it is in conflict with Articles I, II, and III of the federal Constitution which separate the government into legislative, executive and judicial branches.

The court below sustained the motion and dismissed the proceedings. The case comes here by appeal under the provisions of § 238 of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925. U. S. C., Title 28, § 345; U. S. C., Title 18, § 682.

First. The contention seems to be that the proviso makes it necessary to read § 8 as substantively prohibiting unreasonable variations in the weight, measure or numerical count of the quantity and contents of any package from that marked on the outside of the package; and that the test thereby indicated is so indefinite and uncertain that it fails to fix any ascertainable standard of guilt, or afford a valid definition of a crime. In support of the contention United States v. Cohen Grocery Co., 255 U. S.

81, United States v. Brewer, 139 U. S. 278, Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U. S. 385, and other decisions of this Court are relied upon.

We are of opinion that the construction thus sought to be put upon the act cannot be sustained; and, therefore, other considerations aside, the cases cited do not apply. The substantive requirement is that the quantity of the contents shall be plainly and conspicuously marked in terms of weight, etc. We construe the proviso simply as giving administrative authority to the Secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor to make rules and regulations permitting reasonable variations from the hard and fast rule of the act and establishing tolerances and exemptions as to small packages, in accordance with § 3 thereof.* This construction avoids the doubt which otherwise might arise as to the constitutional point, and, therefore, is to be adopted if reasonably possible. United States v. Standard Brewery, 251 U. S. 210, 220; United States v. La Franca, 282 U. S. 568, 574. We find nothing in the terms of the act to require a division of the proviso so that the power of regulation will apply to the establishment of tolerances and exemptions, but not to reasonable variations. We think both are included. As to this there would be no room for doubt if it were not for the presence of a comma after the word "permitted," or the absence of one after the word "established." Inserting the latter, the proviso would read, "That reasonable variations shall be permitted, and tolerances and also exemptions as to small packages shall be established, by rules and regulations . . ." Punctuation marks are no part of an act. To determine the intent of the law, the court, in construing a statute, will disregard the punctuation, or will repunctuate, if that be necessary, in order to arrive at the natural meaning of the words employed. Hammock v. Loan & Trust Co., 105 U. S. 77, 84-85; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 628; United States v. Oregon & California R. Co., 164 U. S. 526, 541; Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 480; Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Voelker, 129 Fed. 522, 526-527.

Our attention is called to the fact that the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, in reporting the bill which afterwards became the act in question (H. R. 850, 62d Cong., 2d Sess., pp. 2-4), agreed with the view that the authority to make rules and regulations was confined to the establishment of tolerances and exemptions; and that the Senate Committee on Manufactures (S. R. 1216, 62d Cong., 3d Sess., pp. 2-4) reported to the same effect. In proper cases, such reports are given consideration in determining the meaning of a statute, but only where that meaning is doubtful. They cannot be resorted to for the purpose of construing a statute contrary to the natural import of its terms. Wisconsin R. R. Commn. v. C., B. & Q. R. Co., 257 U. S. 563, 588-589; Penna. R. Co. v. International Coal Co., 230 U. S. 184, 199; Van Camp & Sons v. American Can Co., 278 U. S. 245, 253. Like other extrinsic aids to construction their use is "to solve, but not to create an ambiguity." Hamilton v. Rathbone, 175 U. S. 414, 421. Or, as stated in United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 396, "If the language be clear it is conclusive. There can be no construction where there is nothing to construe." The same rule is recognized by the English courts. In King v. Commissioners, 5 A. & E. 804, 816, Lord Denman, applying the rule, said that the court was constrained to give the words of a private act then under consideration an effect which probably was "never contemplated by those who obtained the act, and very probably not intended by the legislature which enacted it. But our duty is to look to the language employed, and construe it in its natural and obvious sense." See also United States v. Lexington Mill Co., 232 U. S. 399, 409; Caminetti v. United States, 242 U. S. 470, 485.

Moreover, the practical and long continued construction of the executive departments charged with the administration of the act and with the duty of making the rules and regulations therein provided for, has been in accordance with the view we have expressed as to the meaning of the section under consideration. The rules and regulations, as amended on May 11, 1914, deal with the entire subject in detail under the recital, "(i) The following tolerances and variations [italics supplied] from the quantity of the contents marked on the package shall be allowed: . . ." Then follows an enumeration of discrepancies due to errors in weighing which occur in packing conducted in compliance with good commercial practice; due to differences in capacity of bottles and similar containers, resulting from unavoidable difficulties in manufacture, etc.; or in weight due to atmospheric differences in various places, etc. These regulations, which cover variations as well as tolerances and exemptions, have been in force for a period of more than eighteen years, with the silent acquiescence of Congress. If the meaning of the statutory words was doubtful, so as to call for a resort to extrinsic aid in an effort to reach a proper construction of them, we should hesitate to accept the committee reports in preference to this contemporaneous and long continued practical construction of the act on the part of those charged with its administration. Such a construction, in cases of doubtful meaning, is accepted unless there are cogent and persuasive reasons for rejecting it. See, for example, United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 253.

Second. The contention that the act contravenes the provisions of the Constitution with respect to the separation of the governmental powers is without merit. That the legislative power of Congress cannot be delegated is, of course, clear. But Congress may declare its will, and after fixing a primary standard, devolve upon administrative officers the "power to fill up the details" by prescribing administrative rules and regulations. That the authority conferred by the act now under review in this respect does not transcend the power of Congress is not open to reasonable dispute. The effect of the provision assailed is to define an offense, but with directions to those charged with the administration of the act to make supplementary rules and regulations allowing reasonable variations, tolerances and exemptions, which, because of their variety and need of detailed statement, it was impracticable for Congress to prescribe. The effect of the proviso is evident and legitimate, namely, to prevent the embarrassment and hardship which might result from a too literal and minute enforcement of the act, without at the same time offending against its purposes. The proviso does not delegate legislative power but confers administrative functions entirely valid within principles established by numerous decisions of this court, of which the following may be cited as examples. Buttfield v. Stranahan, 192 U. S. 470, 496; Plymouth Coal Co. v. Pennsylvania, 232 U. S. 531, 542; United States v. Grimaud, 220 U. S. 506, and authorities reviewed.

Judgment reversed.

MR. JUSTICE BRANDEIS, MR. JUSTICE STONE and MR. JUSTICE CARDOZO concur in the result on the ground that the statute, as punctuated, reads as its legislative history shows Congress intended it to read, and that, so read, it is sufficiently definite to satisfy constitutional requirements.
